

Fredy Salamanca González & Yomaira Angélica Herreño-Contreras

Fredy Salamanca is a full time English teacher – researcher at Universidad de Cartagena in Cartagena de Indias, Colombia. He holds a B.A. in modern languages (English – Spanish) a M.A. in Language Teaching and currently, he is a PhD. candidate in Educational Sciences. Fredy has been a presenter in national and international events and a reviewer for national and international journals. Professor Fredy belongs to the research group DRIE (doing research to improve education) at Universidad Santo Tomás in Villavicencio, Meta, Colombia. His research interests are related to metacognition, autonomy, academic writing, identity, language, linguistics and research.

Yomaira Angélica Herreño-Contreras holds a B.A in Modern Languages (Universidad Surcolombiana), a M.A in Comparative Literature and Literary Translation (Universidad Pompeu Fabra). Currently, she is a Ph.D. candidate in Comparative Literature (University of Auckland), a member of the research group DRIE and an article reviewer for some scholarly journals in Colombia and abroad. She has published two books and some articles in research journals and translations in literary reviews. She has participated as a lecturer in various conferences worldwide. She is interested in literary translation, prose poetry, comparative literature, TEFL, ESP, HOTS, and Problematizing Pedagogy.