

Biodata: Estefania Alvear, Maritza Rosas-Maldonado, & Annjeanette Martin

Estefania Alvear is a doctoral student in Education and research assistant at Universidad Andres Bello, Chile. She has a MA in Teaching English as a Foreign Language from Universidad Andres Bello and a BA in Linguistics Applied to English Language from Universidad de las Fuerzas Armadas ESPE, Ecuador. Her research interests are related to initial EFL teacher education, professional development, and teacher well-being.

Maritza Rosas-Maldonado is an English teacher and researcher at Universidad Andres Bello, Santiago. She holds a PhD in Applied Linguistics from University of Liverpool, UK, a Masters in Linguistics from Universidad de Concepción and a BA in English teaching from Universidad de Los Lagos. Her research interests are related to initial teacher education, teacher development and currently language teacher well-being.

Annjeanette Martin is an Associate Professor at Universidad de los Andes, Santiago, Chile. She has a Ph.D. in Foreign Language Education from the University of Texas at Austin. She is a language teacher, language teacher educator, and researcher. Her current research interests are related to teaching and learning foreign/second languages, initial EFL teacher education, professional development, and teacher well-being.