

Biodata: Hani Mansooji, Armaghan Qaleshahzari, and Mehdi Javid

Hani Mansooji is a lecturer at Mazandaran University of Science and Technology and has been teaching advanced English and IELTS/TOEFL preparation courses since 20 years ago. He finished his Ph.D. and M.A. at the Islamic Azad University, South Tehran Branch. His areas of research interest are Islamic philosophy, language, and ELT.

Armaghan Qaleshahzari received her doctorate in English Language Teaching from Islamic Azad University South Tehran branch. She has taught many different courses at Azad University of South Tehran Branch since 2010. She served in Iran in many roles, including teaching in an international school, college lecturer, and advisor to various institutions. Her research interests include professional identity development. In 2021, she published two research papers in this area. Should any researchers be interested in the same field, she is available to be contacted through armaqan.shahzari@gmail.com.

Mehdi Javid is an assistant professor of English Language at Amin Police University in Tehran, Iran. He is also a published author, translator, interpreter, art enthusiast, and an applied linguist. As a researcher, he is interested in ESP, curriculum development, syllabus design, and material development.