

Biodata: Samina Imran Khan, Mehwish Arif, Rahila Huma Anwar, & Sajida Zaki

Samina Imran Khan is an Assistant Professor at DHACSS College for Women Karachi. She has over two decades of progressive experience in ELT at Graduate and Post-Graduate level. As a researcher, she has explored the themes of nativization, language assessment and developing writing skills of ELLs, ensuing Action Research. Khan's teaching philosophy aims to promote critical thinking and advance knowledge. As a skilled professor, she fosters an engaging student community at DHACSS. Khan has made a substantial contribution to the scholarly conversation with her research article "Action Research Framework and Process Writing Approach for Teaching College English Language Learners' Essay Writing", which highlights her approach to Action Research.

Mehwish Arif is a dedicated lecturer at NED University of Engineering & Technology. She specializes in academic writing, writing pedagogy, critical discourse analysis, computational linguistics, and sociolinguistics. She is passionate about fostering intellectual growth and combines extensive research expertise with innovative pedagogical approaches to inspire and empower students. She is committed to advancing interdisciplinary knowledge and addressing contemporary challenges in language and communication. Through collaborative research and community engagement, she strives to contribute meaningfully to academic discourse and promote inclusive educational practices.

Rahila Huma Anwar, (Ph.D., Associate Fellow (AFHEA)) is an Assistant Professor in English and Applied Linguistics, MS and PhD Coordinator at NED University of Engineering & Technology, Karachi, Pakistan. Her PhD studies in Applied Linguistics explored the English language teachers' Emotional Intelligence, Self-efficacy, and Effectiveness. She has publications in both local and international journals. Her recent co-authored book chapters are published under the themes of 'English as A Medium of Instruction in South Asia Issues in Equity and Social Justice' and 'Comparative Research on Educational Policy Responses to the COVID-19 Pandemic: Eastern vs. Western Perspectives.' Dr. Anwar has diverse experience as an academic with more than 15 years of university teaching experience at the undergraduate and postgraduate levels. She has supervised several MS Applied Linguistics research projects, presented research at different forums

Sajida Zaki, PhD, is a Professor of English and Applied Linguistics and Chairperson of the English Linguistics and Allied Studies Department, NED University of Engineering & Technology, Karachi, Pakistan. She has a rich, professional career that spreads over two decades with experiences as an English Language practitioner, teacher educator, program administrator, and researcher. She has introduced the English, linguistics and applied linguistics programmes at the university. She has supervised 30 master's and four doctoral research projects/theses on diverse aspects of Applied Linguistics. She has numerous journal and conference publications both nationally and internationally. Her recent co-authored book chapters are published under the themes of 'English as A Medium of Instruction in South Asia Issues in Equity and Social Justice' and 'Comparative Research on Educational Policy Responses to the COVID-19 Pandemic: Eastern vs. Western Perspectives.' Her research interests include second language teaching learning, language pedagogy, academic writing, instructional-design, world Englishes, and language teacher education and development.